A webpage is to contain 12 blocks of text, each representing a description of one of the twelve western astrological star signs.

- If the screen size is below 350px, the blocks of text should be displayed in a single column of 12.
- If the screen size is greater than 350px but less than 720px, the blocks of text should be displayed in two columns of six blocks, with padding of 20px between the two columns.
- If the screen size is greater than 720px, the text should be displayed in three columns of four blocks, with padding of 20px between the three columns.

Using what you've learned in this unit, provide code that achieves this.

The screenshot shows a code editor with a toolbar at the top containing icons for undo, redo, bold, italic, underline, strikethrough, subscript, superscript, bulleted list, numbered list, indent, outdent, link, unlink, search, and help. Below the toolbar, the text reads: "I have written only the CSS part to save the time making assumptions that there is appropriate HTML part of code already exists." This is followed by a list of two assumptions: "1) The class block to each of the blocks of text of western astrological star signs exists." and "2) All the blocks in a container are wrapped with the class blocks-container." Below the list, the text says: "Now, CSS part (formatted using sublime text 4)..." and then shows a CSS class definition: ".block { box-sizing: border-box; width: 100%;".
